

Acknowledgement

Apart from the many friends, without whom the book may not have been written, the real gratitude must go to three women who taught me from my youngest days that I was unique. Grandma Jessie McGuire, Nana Vera Cleary (nee Richards), and my mother, Cynthia McGuire, never failed to reinforce that I was different, and more importantly, to embrace that difference. Their great legacy of self-confidence from within, provided during my youngest days when they were still with me, encouraged a life of individual thought and action, making the journey always interesting, at most times pleasurable, and throughout the roughest stages, tolerable. Thank you for the gift of feeling good about myself everyday.

Further to that personal support, I need to thank those who contributed to this book with their own Vision Statements. Many of those contributions came from people who had initially approached me because of a loss of self-confidence that needed to be corrected. It was humbling to see that not only have their lives have been changed forever because of the training provided, but they are now confident enough to share their new attitude to life with everyone else.
